Idea behind the show's theme:

This is a show about conquest and the rise to power and immense influence the historical figure, Temujin Genghis (Chinggis) Khan had on shaping the Asian and Eastern European cultures we know today.

"It is not sufficient that I succeed – all others must fail." Temujin Genghis (Chinggis) Khan (1165-1227)

The show opens with an opening theme representing the "Warload", Genghis Khan and his travels. Khan is known to history as one of the most brutal, charismatic and successful warlords to have ever lived. He was a strategic genius and together with his loyal army built one of the largest empires ever known to man. So great was his influence that the Mongol Empire continued to expand even after his death.

His non-military influences on today's world were introducing a writing system still in use today in Inner Mongolia and creating a society which stressed religious tolerance. The Mongol nation would not exist today if it were not for his influence and his campaigns.
